... New York, The Dryden press, 1945.

"Gives in summary form a brief picture of every independent nation and of every major dependent people of the world. It discusses their land and its inhabitants; their history between the two great wars; their economic life and their economic relations with other countries; and it finally emphasizes the salient factors which it is believed will determine the part each may play in the world of tomorrow."—Intro. p. 5.

West Florida.

The northern coast of the gulf of Mexico between the Mississippi and Apalachicola rivers. Formed part of Louisiana until 1763 when French possessions east of the Mississippi were ceded to Great Britain. British West Florida was organized in 1763, with line of 31° as northern boundary, changed in 1765 to 32° 28'. Conquered by Spain in 1763, its northern boundary was in dispute until 1765, when 31° was agreed upon, and the section thereby gained by the U. S. between 31° & 32° 28' became Mississippi territory. In 1810-11 the western section, or Baton Rouge district, of Spanish West Florida revolted from Spain and was joined to Louisiana; in 1812, the middle section, or Mobile district, was annexed to Mississippi territory; and in 1813 the eastern section with the whole of West Florida was sold by Spain to the U. S., forming the present state of Florida.
